

Nothing but the Truth

Synopsis

Found at the scene of the crime, Father John, a rigid old fashion Priest, head of the christian orphanage in Las Cruses, New Mexico is arrested for the murder of Deacon Paul - a priest who also worked with the orphans along side Father John. Put in jail without bond, and forced to resign, Father John is assigned to an attorney by the Catholic Diocese of Las Cruses, NM.

During the proceedings, a web of pornography and drugs stirs much controversy. But those who testify in court also have their own motives to have committed the murder.

Father John claims innocence at the witness stand claiming that he had found Father Paul in his room laying on the floor moaning for help. Contrary to the evidence presented in court, he had accidently touched the knife in his body while trying to save his life. He remained by his side in prayers until his very last breath waiting for help to arrive.

The jurors are in recess for the final verdict. Will their decision rock religion from its very foundation? Will the jurors set aside their religious beliefs and deliver justice for Father John?
